The measure provides for the selection of a supervisor of construction and under its terms either army engineer officers or the superintendent of the Capitol are made eligible for this duty. The bill declares that the construction shall be carried out under the direction of an officer of the government "especially qualified for this duty." The consent of the head of the department under whom the officer is serving must be obtained for him to act in the specified capacity. When the officer is supervising the construction of the new building or buildings it is provided that he shall receive an increase of 25 per cent over his present salary, so that this berth will be a good one for some one in the government serv-

THE HIGH PRICES.

At the hash-works where I board, but one topic now prevails: "How the price of grub has soared!" Drearily the landlord wails. In his old, accustomed place, he is sitting, at each meal; sad and corpse-like is his face, as he carves his ancient veal. When I ask that solemn jay, if he'll pass the butter 'round, "Butter costs," I hear him say, "almost half a bone a pound." When I want a slice of duck, his expression is a sin; "This thin drake cost me a buck, and the quacks were not thrown in!" Through the muddy coffee's steam, I can hear him saving now: "I desired a pint of cream, and they charged me for a cow." "Let me have some beans," I cried-I was hungry as could be; "Sure!" he wearily replied; "shall I give you two, or three? Beans," he said, "long years ago, of rank cheapness were the signs; now they cost three scads a throw-and you do not get the vines." Once, a morn, I wished an egg, and the landlord had a swoon; with his head soaked in a keg, he regained his mind by noon; "Once," he moaned, "an ege was cheap; times have changed, alas! since then; now the price would make you weep-and they don't throw in the hen!"
